The commentary of a severe friend, is better *than the imbelishments of a sweetlip'd flatter*r.

Nothing is more common in conversation, than intermedling with other mens concernment

Follow not the multitude in the evil of sin, lest thou share with the multitude in the evil of punishm.t

Be not rashly exceptious, nor rudely familiar;
the one breeds contention, the other contempt.

A truly valiant man will dare nothing but what he may, and fear nothing but what he ought.

To Mr Smith

Nimble: 7

Honour and dominion, belongs unto the Omnipotent Jehovah.

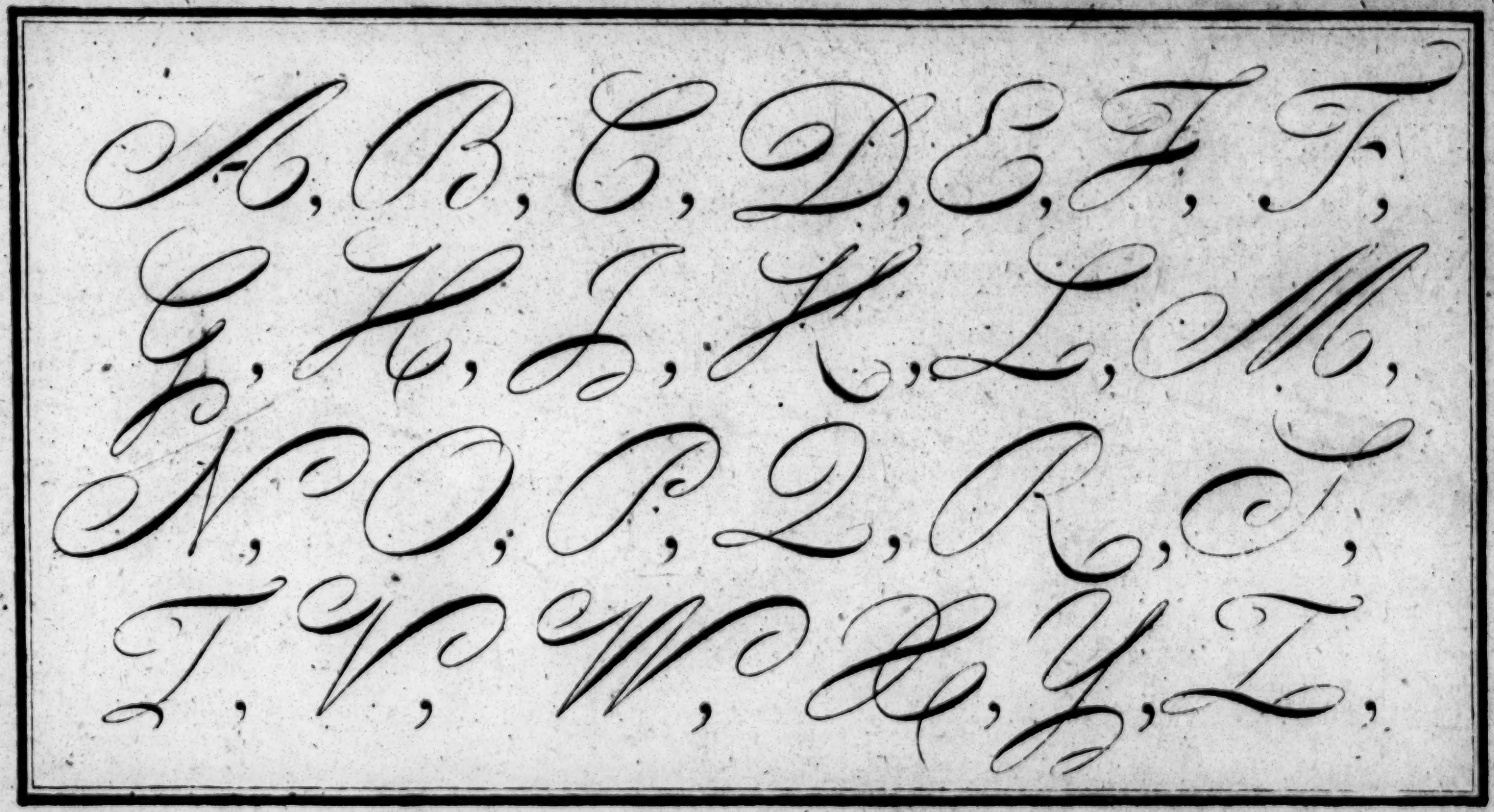
Ignorance is most commonly found,
where pretentions do much abound.



A, B, C, D, E, F, F,
G, H, J, K, L, M,
N, O, P, Q, R, S,
T, V, W, X, Y, Z,

Commend no man to his face, nor discommend
any manner of person behind his back. M

Men of wisdom, eloquence, and learning, are accounted the honour glory and pillars of Government.

He that buys short pleasure with long pain,
has no great reason to brag of his bargain.

Fear nothing but infamy: dare any thing but injury: the measure of magnanimity is neither to be rash or timerous.
